Letter or Email Response:

I have lived in Debden over 14 years. I have often attended the Jessell green fun day with my family, children and grandchildren and we have all had a thoroughly good time. Green spaces are so important for people to come together to have fun and play and exercise. I am originally from rural Essex and moving to Debden has always felt good to still be able to enjoy green space. I am a carer for a lady with dementia and she thoroughly enjoys being taken out in her wheelchair and watching the children play, people walking their dogs and the general loveliness of Deden's green space including its abundance of trees. Green Belt space is not easy to access if you are assisting a physically disabled person or a person with a young family pushing prams because it can be hilly or uneven, or on private land. Debden has already had additional housing built over the years and more people mean more congestion on roads and more pollution which is harmful to all. I have heard that other Essex Districts are planning new garden villages. Why not Epping Forest? Please let me know you have received my objection.
