Letter or Email Response:

I am 94 years old and moved to Debden with my wife over 60 years ago. I was happy to do so leaving London behind, after returning home after serving in the second world war. We moved to what felt like the countryside. We brought our two sons and added to our family a daughter and have seen Debden obviously change over the years. More cars, that now park all over the pavements, busier and congested roads, particularly Rectory lane. Despite my age I still manage to take a short walk with my dog and I benefit due to my own reducing mobility to enjoy the green space of Jessel Green and Rochford Green. They have always been there and my children grew up benefiting from playing games with their friends and we have enjoyed the fun days organized on Jessel Green over recent years. I cannot walk or travel far. My wife now has dementia and she can benefit from being taken out in her wheelchair by her carer to enjoy the green space that Debden offers. Our generations have enjoyed a sense of great wellbeing living in this environment. Do not spoil Debden through lack of foresight of the damage you will do if you ruin things for everyone's future.
