Please provide reasons for your view on Loughton:

I understand people need homes, but I cannot believe that there are proposals to build on the most central, and therefore most cherished and well used areas of open space in Debden. Rochford and Jessel Green if this is all about finding homes for desperate people then why not choose outer areas like the playing field next to Davenant school in Willingal Road, the playing field on the edge of Newmans lane and Rectory Lane, other empty spaces by the side of Rectory lane and the space between Clays Lane in Englands Lane? These are on the edges of our home and would cause less disruption, deprivation and hardship. Or is it not about finding desperately need homes, and more about where property developers would be able to make the most profit? I also understand that no one in the local area, including people in Epping, Chigwell, Theydon Bois and
